Behind the Counter.

'My first day at the store!' said Carry Wallingford, with a curious thrill through her, as if an ice cold stream were trickling down the line of her spinal column. 'Oh, I wish I were a rich girl, and didn't have to work?'

'Work is honorable, my child, said old Uncle Wolsey, who, with his spectacles on his nose was trying to spell through the illegible paragraphs of the daily paper, mutterfng to himself that 'either they didn't print as good as they used to, or else his old eyesight was failing.'

'Yes, I know,' fluttered Carry; 'but—but I'm very willing that someone else should have the honor this time.'

Uncle Wolsey turned his glasses with mild reproach upon his niece's pink-and white balsam of a face.

'I wish I could be as brave as you, Uncle Wolsey!' said Carry, as she tied the crimson strings of her little capote under her round chin.

Old Wolsey Wallingford had sheltered his little pet lamb by his hearth-fold all her lifetime until now. He was a jeweler by trade, and he had kept his unpretending store open as long as possible. But the tide of fashion went by, and left him stranded on the unfrequented side-street, where the sign of the tarnished silver watch attracted no further attention.

And one day, when he had set all day in the window with his magnifying-glass, working at some impossible old time piece, whose owner had died and never called for it, twilight crept darkly over his eyesight and his heart. He laid down the tools.

'All day long,' said he, 'and never a customer! Well-a-day! it is time for the old man to shut up his store at last.'

He went out and put up the wooden shutters, with a heart that was heavier than they, and from that time thenceforward the wooden imitation of the silver watch swung no longer over the door.

Uncle Wolsey had been conquered in life's battle, and had laid down his arms, and now it was that Carry reluctantly threw herself into the breach.

How could she let the dear old man starve? And Mr. Pickrell's fancy and dry goods store on Sixth avenue was really a very creditable establishment, and Mrs. Pickrell herself had promised, from the severe heights of the cashier's desk, to 'keep an eye' upon old Mr. Wallingford's niece, and if her services proved desirable, there was no sort of doubt but that her salary would be increased in time.

So Carry buttoned up her sack, drew on her neat lisle thread gloves and took the little basket, in which, wrapped in a napkin, was packed her lunch of apple-pie and cheese, and went forth to meet her new career, little reckoning how brief it was to be.

At first it was not very pleaaant. The store was small and stuffy, with gorgeous piles of cretonne and chintz at the door, and festoons of laces, silk handkerchiefs and colored jerseys flapping against the head of the girls behind the counter, of whom there were three besides Carry—bold, high-voiced damsels, who wore their hair down over the bridge of their noses and giggled incessantly.

Customers came and went, change was made and paper parcels expeditiously wrapped up.

Mr. Pickrell walked the floor with his hands in his pockets, ordered away small girls whose noses were flattened too persistently against the windows outside, and smiled beamingly on old ladies who stopped to examine the quality of the chintzes and flannel suitings.

Mrs. Pickrell reprimanded the young women with the banged hair for giggling too loud when there were customers in the store, and called to Carry to 'mind what she was about' when a box of ribbons fell off the counter upon the floor.

Carry grew very weary, her head began to ache, and she wondered how long it would be before 'shutting-up time.'

At last a tall, brown-faced young man came in, wearing a foreign-looking coat trimmed with fur, and somehow bearing in his aspect the indescribable stamp of belonging to some other country.

One of the banged haired nymphs was eating her lunch; the second had rushed up the street to get change for a ten dollar bill; and the third was engaged in matching an impossible shade of ribbon for a young lady who was determined not to be pleased with anything.

'Carry!' shrilly signaled Mrs. Pickrell.

And our heroine advanced gallantly to the rescue.

'What can I show you?' she asked, timidly, of the new customer.

'Silk, please,' said the young man.

And when Carry perceived that he was considerably more embarrassed than herself, she took courage.

'What color?' said she.

'I don't know,' answered the customer—'that is—I haven't quite made up my mind. Perhaps you could suggest—'

'What is it for?' Carry asked, with mild toleration of his evident bewilderment; and at the same time she could not help perceiving that he was very handsome, with wavy black hair and dark, liquid eyes, long lashes, and pleasant to look upon.

'For a dress.'

'A dress? But is it for a young lady, or an old one?'

'I don't know,' acknowledged the gentleman—'young—that is, not old. She can't be over forty. To tell you the truth'—and he smiled in spite of himself—'I've never seen the lady. But she is a cousin of mine, and I want to make her a present.'

'Yes, I understand,' said Carry. 'Is it to be black or colored?'

'What would you advise?' said the stranger, blindly clutching at Carry's feminine counsel as a shiwrecked mariner may be expected to cling to a floating spar.

'Black would perhaps be more suitable, seeing that you don't know the lady's age or complexion,' remarked Carry.

'But blue and pink are such pretty colors!' pleaded the dark-haired young man, looking longingly at the piles of lustrous fabrics on the shelves.

'Yes,' said Carry, growing interested; 'but they are only suitable for a very few occasions, while black is always appropriate.'

'I thought that only old ladies wore black silk?'

'Young ladies do, also,' calmly asserted Carry.

'If you were selecting a dress,' said the stranger, in desperation, 'which color would you choose?'

'I would choose seal brown,' said Carry, after a second or two of deliberation.

'Eh? should you? Show me seal-brown then, please,' said the customer. 'It's a little grave, perhaps'—surveying the shining folds, 'but it's pretty, yes, it's very pretty? How many yards now does it take for a dress?'

'I should think,' said Carry, after a second interval of reflection, 'that fifteen yards might answer if it was economically cut'

'I don't know anything about economy,' said the young man; 'I want a good allowance.'

'Then I should recommend eighteen yards,' advised Carry.

'Cut me off eighteen yards,' said the gentleman, promptly; 'and put in the linings and trimmings and all that sort of thing, please—you'll know what I need, better than I do myself. And I say—'

'Sir?' said Carry, as he hesitated.

'Have you anything that would make a nice present for an old gentleman, do you think?'

'A silk neck muffler?' suggested Carry, her eyes running across the shelves of the store, 'or a pair of fur-lined gloves?'

'Capital!' said the customer. 'Put 'em both in the parcel.'

'Thank you, sir,' said Carry. 'Where shall we send them?'

'Nowhere,' answered the customer. 'I'll take them along myself, and then I shall be sure that there is no mistake. I'm a thousand times obliged to you miss!'

'Not in the least,' said Carry, with dignity.

So the dark-eyed stranger with the fur-trimmed coat departed, and Mrs. Pickrell praised the young shop girl for the good sale she had made.

'You'll be a valuable hand in time,' said she. 'It isn't often we get a chance to sell a silk pattern like that. Folks mostly go on Broadway for their expensive dresses,' she added, with a sigh.

Carry was very tired when she came home in the frosty October dusk. The store did not close until ten, but the girls took turns, two by two, to stay after sunset, and Carry's turn fortunately did not come until the next night.

When she reached home Uncle Wolsey had the lamp lighted and the kettle boiling for tea, and was slicing off some canned corn beef, and 'minding' the toast before the fire at the same time.

It looked cheery and pleasant; Carry drew a long sigh of relief.

'How nice it is to be at home, Uncle Wolsey!' she cried. 'Do let me make the toast! And, oh! it hasn't been such a very hard day, after all. And Mrs. Pickrell says I've made the best sale she has had for a week. Such a handsome young man. Uncle Wolsey! and he treated me as if I were a princess instead of a working girl, and—'

'Stop, stop!' said Uncle Wolsey, pausing with the knife still in his hand. 'I've had a good-looking young man here, too, Carry. Needn't think you have got a monopoly of articles. What do you think of your poor mother's cousin from the seal-fur fisheries in Alaska? And what do you think of his bringing these things here as a present for you and me—eh?'

'Why, Uncle Wolsey—' almost shrieked Carry.

'What's the matter?' said the old man. 'Ain't they pretty? Oughtn't I to have taken 'em?'

'It's the very man,' said Carry. 'I sold them to him this afternoon.'

'Hey?' said Uncle Wolsey.

'At the store,' said Carry. 'Oh, Uncle Wolsey! And is he really my cousin? I am so glad.'

'Glad of what?' retorted a strong, cheery voice, and in came the mysterious stranger himself. 'Why, I declare,' he cried, 'if there isn't the little girl who sold me the things to day.'

'Glad that you are my cousin,' said Carry, with a mischievous smile and a low courtesy. 'Because—because I thought you were very pleasant and kind—'

'And I thought—' said the stranger. 'But no, I won't tell you what I thought. How do you do cousin?'

'I am so glad you chose the seal-brown silk!' demurely observed Carry. 'What should I have done with a blue or a pink silk!'

'It would have looked very well on you,' said the cousin meditatively eyeing her, 'blue would have matched your eyes, pink, your cheeks.'

'Just my sentiment,' chuckled Uncle Wolsey. 'Come, young folks—come; tea is ready. And the toast is getting cold.'

Not until the visitor had taken his leave did Uncle Wolsey, smoking his pipe before the fire, impart to Carry an additional piece of news.

'What d'ye suppose Mr. Lennox told me he came down to the State for, Carry?'

'I'm sure I don't know,' said Carry, innocently.

'To get him a wife!' said Uncle Wolsey.

'Oh!' said Carry, shading her face from the fire. 'I am sure I hope he will be successful!'

The three banged-hair young maiden at Pickrell's Emporium subscribed to buy a Bohemian glass colygne set for Carry Wallingford's wedding present; but they murmured much among themselves because this golden stratum of luck had not come to them.

'We're just as pretty as she,' said they; 'and much prettier, some folks would say. And why couldn't the customer have fallen to our lot?'

There are some questions which Cupid alone can answer. And he, the winged rogue is obstinately silent.—Helen Forest Graves.

A Story Without End.

We are half a mind to begin to write a story that may never end, founded on facts that are ever obvious. Hippodromus, taking his morning walk in the streets of Lucignano, comes upon Theodectes, a laborer, and says to him, 'Why are you always at work?' Theodectes answers, 'I am always at work to get money to buy food to give me strength to do more work that I may get more money to buy more food to get more strength to do more work to get more money to buy more food to get more strength to do more work to get more money to buy—' This is the beginning of the story without end, and the facts on which it is founded, they are without end also.—Winsted (Conn.) Press.

Fred Vokes in Disguise.

How He Scooped in Some Southern Ohio Would-be Sharps.

Fred Vokes, the English sprint runner, is one of the fleetest men on the cinder path. Fred is one of the kind, too, who knows how to use his hands as well as his legs, and between the two he always manages to catch to that first thought of all true sons of Britain—his stomach. Fred is never at a loss for a friend or a dollar, and likes good living as well as the best of them. He is a big, robust fellow, and is so much inclined embonpoint that anybody not acquainted with him would never pick him out as a foot runner. As an illustration of the way in which Fred turns a penny once in a while it is only necessary to recite the particulars of one of his little escapades. Recently he heard there was an amateur foot runner in southern Ohio whose friends believed him a wonder. He was not long in providing himself with a wooden chest, and two days later the name of William Elliot decorated the register of the hotel at McArthur. He came there a full-fledged patent medicine man, and after making the rounds of the village stores without selling one bottle of his stuff, he returned to the pool room attached to the hotel and tried his hand at pocketing the ivories. He was the sucker in the crowd to the extent of three or four games, when he threw down his cue and said: 'I am no pool player, but I will fight, wrestle or run any man in town for $100.' His bluff was a good one, and the bait was quickly grabbed down by one of the friends of the aforesaid running wonder.

'I'll take that bet,' said one of the men in the saloon, little dreaming that he was talking to one of the first professionals in the country, 'and we'll back a McArthur boy to run you one hundred yards.' The money was put up and the amateur runner introduced to Vokes, alias Eliott. Some of the village sports called the alleged patent medicine man to one side and said: 'Can you run?'

'Well, I should say I could,' was his reply.

'We will back you,' one of them said, 'but want you to run a trial. Where's your running shoes?'

'What's them?' innocently quizzed the medicine man. 'I run in my boots.'

The yokels looked at each other and laughed. They provided him with shoes for the trial, and Elliot purposely covered the hundred yards in very slow time. This settled it with the village sports, and they went immediately and put thair money on the home runner.

This was exactly what Vokes wanted, as he was not working or bucking for himself. He had all the money he needed, and covered every dollar that the McArthur men put up. About $600 was put up and the patent medicine man, to the astonishment of the McArthur people, ran away from their pet runner with as much ease as Jay-Eye-See would with a cart horse. The McArthur men saw they were duped, but did not squeal. 'A man on a crutch couldn't go in that town now and get a race,' was Vokes' parting remarks as he finished his story the other night.

Words of Weight.

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." These sublime words, with which Holy Scripture prefaces the moral story of our world, form not only the heading of the Bible, they are its summary—they tell what has been, is and will be, in the relation between heaven and earth. They also form a summary of dogmatics, of ethics, of history, and of political economy, inasmuch as they mark the spring, the river-bed and the issue of the stream of humanity. They teach us these things: our God-origin, God-dependence, God-consecration, God-guidance, God-destiny, and in all of them a universal brotherhood. The ten commandments may be regarded as the negative, limiting, legal aspect of all this; the Lord's prayer as its positive, ideal and gospel aspect. For law is in its nature mainly negative; the gospel is positive. If I were to preach a sermon on "Charity," I could choose no better text than the opening words of Genesis.—Rev. Dr. Edersheim.

A Broomstick Selection.

Said a patriarch to his daughter: "A place for everything, and everything in its place." Then to his son: "Select a wife, my son, that will never step over a broomstick." The son was obedient to the lesson. "Now," said he pleasantly on a jolly holiday, to one of his guests, "I appoint that broomstick to choose me a wife. The young lady who will not step over it, shall have the offer of my hand." They passed from the splendid salon to the grove; some stumbled over the broomstick, and others passed over it. At length a young lady stooped and put it in its place. The promise was fulfilled; she became the wife of an educated and wealthy young man, and he the husband of a prudent, industrious and lovely woman. He brought a fortune to her and she knew how to save one.

A Fearful Calamity in a London Public Hall.

A False Alarm of Fire Starts a Panic in Which Men, Women and Children are Trampled and Crushed by the Frightened Crowd.

LONDON, January 19.—The hall in Prince's street, Spitalfields, where a fatal panic occurred last night, is a favorite resort for the Jews of that part of London. Last evening a benefit performance was given and the place was crowded. During the progress of the play a man and woman quarreled in the street outside and near the main doorway of the hall. The man used violence and the woman screamed. Her cry was heard by a passer-by, who misunderstood it and shouted "Fire." The woman's screams and the cries of 'fire' were heard inside and at once created a panic, the audience, numbering five hundred, rising in a body and rushing pell-mell for the main entrance.

The manager of the Hebrew Dramatic Club, which was giving the entertainment, was on the stage when the panic began. He perceived at once that there was no good reason for it and did all in his power to allay the excitement and to afford all possible facilities for the exit of the people. The hall has a number of entrances and he had them all thrown wide open, and called on the people when they would not remain to divide and use all the doorways. But they paid no attention to him. In fact, many of them construed the manager's earnestness into proof that there was a fire and these increased their exertions to get out. The whole crowd, as if with one impulse, made for the main entrance. It happened that among those who first reached it were a number of women and children, who had been occupying some of the rear seats. They were overborne by strong men attempting to pass them and as the women and children fell at the doorway they tripped up others who were crushed down by the rush of the frantic crowd. It took but a few minutes to empty the house and the alarm was so thorough that not a soul among the entire audience refrained from the struggle to get out.

"EVERY ONE FOR HIMSELF."

When the people, after reaching the street, ascertained the facts of the situation a scene of great disorder of another kind ensued, caused by the discovery that numbers were missing. Then a rush back was made. This, however, was stopped at the main entrance by the police, who had arrived and assumed control. Seventeen corpses were found inside the theatre, near the door. They were all torn, crushed and disfigured. Of the dead, twelve were women, three were boys, one was a girl and the other a man. The remains were almost unrecognizable. Eye-witnesses say that the way the strong men who got uppermost in the struggle at the door crushed and trampled on those who fell down in the conflict was indescribably ruthless and brutal, although of course not wilful, it being a case of "every one for himself." A number of infants carried in their mothers' arms and clung to through all the panic were also crushed or smothered to death and a number of others were fatally injured.

The scene during the attempted return of the crowd was painful in the extreme. The bereaved remained at the doorways all night waiting to have their dead restored to them, and the lamentations of the women were heart-breaking.

The hall to-day resembles a disordered auction room. Broken furniture, crushed toys, children's hats, broken bottles, orange peel, actor's wigs and shreds of clothes lie scattered over the floor. There are many blood spots on the backs of chairs as well as on the floor. Every here and there ghastly knots of hair are clinging to the furniture. Several escapes were made through the windows, most of which are badly smashed.

A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE.

The bodies were found at the bottom of the stone stairs leading to the gallery. Here a terrible struggle took place between the front of the crowd rushed from the main floor and the leaders of the throng which rushed down the gallery stairs. The dead lay mostly in two opposing rows, the feet of each row close to those of the other, one row of heads lying toward the gallery stairway, the other toward the opposite side of the hall. The faces of the dead were distorted with agonized expressions. A little girl, since identified as Eva Marks, was found lying at the bottom of a pile of dead. Her lower limbs were bare and the upper part of dress was torn to shreds, showing that she had fought hard for life. Isaac Levy, a venerable man, with long white flowing beard and hair, was found among the dead. He and his wife were regular attendants at the performances given in the hall. They always sat near the door. It is thought that Mr. Levy, instead of fleeing alone when the panic started, remained to help and protect his wife. So the old man was brushed down by the rushing crowd and stamped to death. His wife's body lay opposite. The woman was in the prime of life and wore brightly-colored clothes and quantities of jewelry. Beside her lay a little boy, whose knickerbockers and stockings were torn to shreds.

Gospel Without Cost.

A venerable Kentuckian told "THE INTERIOR" the following story: A wealthy planter, a man of education, an eloquent speaker, and a successful politician, was converted. He wanted to do good. His neighbors were irreligious, and he felt that his first duty was to them. He built a commodious church, put an organ in it, and hired an organist. He obtained a license to preach, and prepared some excellent sermons. When the house was ready, he sent his servants all over the neighborhood and invited everybody to come to church at 11 o'clock next Sunday. The people came and listened. At the close of the service the preacher thanked them for coming, and invited them to come again next Sunday. On Saturday he sent his servants out to remind them of the Sabbath service. He did this year after year, paying all expenses himself, not taking collections from anybody or anything, for he wanted to convince the people that the gospel was free—'without money and without price.'

'And what was the result?' was asked.

Oh, he preached for twenty years, and there wasn't a single conversion in all that time!

People are not likely to prize very highly that which costs them nothing. If you want to get a man into the church, begin by getting him to do something for it. If you want to develop the piety of a church, train its members to work and to give.

Washington's Birthplace.

There is scarcely a sign now of the house in which Washington was born, on the lower Rappahannok, nor any more of the other houses where he passed his boyhood, over against Fredericksburg, and in the landscape which must have been known to our soldiers who fought at Chancellorville. Both these houses were of the old Virginia stamp—big roomy piles of lumber, with long, sloping bent roof in the rear, and two huge chimneys slapped against the exterior walls at either end. It was at the home in Stafford county must have happened that episode of the cherry tree; and it was there, too, happened [after his father's death] that other better authenticated incident of the boy's subjugation of a young thoroughbred colt which nobody could master; and yet this intreped lad known as George Washington, and known for many athletic feats even as a boy, did master the brute, and so enraged him by the mastership that the poor animal, in a frenzy of protesting plunges, died under the very seat of the boy master. This martyr to young Washington's iron resolve was a great pet of his mother's, under whose special guidance the fatherless lad had now come; and there may have been a bone to pick between them regarding the colt; but never, then or thereafter, any real breach in their mutual regard or love. —"American Agriculturist."

Politeness of Great Men.

Truly great men are polite by instinct to their inferiors. It is one element of their greatness to be thoughtful for others.

The greatest men in the world have been noted for their politeness. Indeed, many have owed their greatness mainly to their popular manners, which induced the people whom they pleased to give them an opportunity to show their power.

Many years ago the errand boy employed by a publishing house in a great city was sent to procure from Edward Everett the proof-sheets of a book he had been examining. The boy entered the vast library, lined from floor to ceiling with books, in fear and trembling. He stood in awe of this famous man, and dreaded to meet him. But Mr. Everett, turning from the desk where he was writing, received the lad with reassuring courtesy, bade him sit down, chatted kindly as he looked for the proof-sheets, and asked:

"Shall I put a paper round them for you?' as politely as if his visitor were the president.

The boy departed in a very comfortable state of mind. He had been raised in his own esteem by Mr. Everett's kindness, and he has never forgotten the lesson it taught him.

H. Y. STITZER, Secretary. JAMES A. MCCLAIN, Chairman.

NEXT! The third of the New York boodle aldermen, O'Neil, will take his chances to go to Sing Sing and work for a living such as it is. His trial began on Monday and if the court pursues a similar course to the foregoing two cases O'Neil will bave to go up too.

TURNING OUT Democratic clerks is all the go now at the state department in Harrisburg. Three of Gov. Pattison's clerks got their dismissals and others will have to follow as soon as Republicans can be found to fill the places satisfactorily. But Pennsylvania is under Republican rule and the Democrats will have to "walk."

WAR between France and Germany seems inevitable. All indications point to hostilities between these two countries which may break out in open battle any time next summer. The dispatches to the press of this country report unusual activity at all the arsenals and the French seem very sanguine about getting Alsace and Loraine back into their possession and have a bitter feeling against anything German.

THE chairmanship of the Democratic State Committee changed hands at the meeting of the committee in Harrisburg last Wednesday. Mr. Hensel, who retired, has filled that position very creditably, considering the disadvantages under which a democratic chairman labors in this state. He has always shown a bold front and never lost hope.

Mr. Dallas Sanders, of Philadelphia, his successor, is said to be an active and faithful democrat, and it is believed that he will make a good leader for the party.

GOVERNOR BEAVER has met with a sad bereavement since he entered the high office of chief magistrate of this Commonwealth, in the death of his three-year-old son, James A., which occurred on Saturday night. The child had suffered but a brief spell from that dreaded malady, diptheria. James was the pet of the family and was an unusually bright child for his age. The mother is almost prostrated by grief and the many friends of the afflicted family received the news with sadness and telegrams of condolence were received at the executive mansion from all parts of the state.

THE list of the Docemratic County Committee for 1887 appears at the head of this column. In glancing over the names it must strike an observant mind that the chairman, Mr, Jas. A. McClain, selected his assistants with circumspection and good judgement. Most of the committee men at this end of the county are young and active Democrats who will take a lively interest in the welfare and success of their party in the county. Led by as energetic a chairman as we know Mr. McClain will be the organization of the Democratic forces of Centre county cannot fail to be thorough and effective.

THE Harrisburg Patriot in commenting editorially upon the death of Governor Beayer's little son, says there are suspicions that something must be radically wrong in the ventilation or drainage of the executive mansion. It calls attention to it that one of Governor Hoyt's children was brought to death's door by the same dangerous disease, while Governor Pattison lost a fine boy by diptheria shortly after his occupancy of the house. A speedy investigation of the surroundings of the building and a removal of the unhealthful influences, if such exist, is recommended, and it is natural that the people of this state feel the greatest concern for the preservation of the health of the chief magistrates families, and urge that if there are any disorders about those premises it should be remedied at once.

WHEN is the general settlement day for state business? is a question very frequently asked and one rather hard to correctly answer, says the Patriot. The fact of the matter is that under the financial system now in vogue there is no time in the year when the commonwealth can properly balance its financial affairs. The fiscal year ends November 30, the appropriation year ends June 30. Licenses are returnable quarterly on the first days of April, July, October and January, and corporations make report of taxes to the first Monday of November.

Under such an arrangement as this how can it be expected that a balance sheet shall be made up showing exclusively the business of any one year in all departments of revenue and expenditure?

There may exist good reasons why the returns of licenses and corporation taxes should be made at the time specified, but there certainly is no valid reason why the fiscal year and the appropriation year should not be made to conform.

HON. LEONARD RHONE, from this county, introduced an important bill in the House of Representatives with the view of equalizing taxation in Pennsylvania. The bill is entitled "an act amendatory of the several acts relating to the assessment and valuation of real, personal and corporate property for the purposes of taxation." The act provides that assessors shall in April assess all real estate and visible personal property at actual cash value, including bonds, mortgages, notes, bills and every other evidence of debt-bearing interest and due from solvent debtors, except only the property exempted by the first section of the ninth article of the State Constitution. The property of private corporations included shall be such only as owned by them otherwise than strictly and exclusively for corporate purposes in conducting the authorized business of the company and not clearly represented by its taxed corporate stock and shares.

One section provides that every taxable person or corporation shall furnish the assessors a written statement of all taxable property. Every evidence of debt not so reported shall be uncollectable by suit and interest thereon forfeited. Assessors shall state in the assessment books the amount secured by dower, mortgage, judgement, ground rent or charge, upon the premises of any taxable person, firm, association or corporation and deduct the same from the valuation of the encumbered property, provided said taxable person, firm, association or corporation shall pay the yearly amount of tax upon such dower, mortgage, judgement or charge to the collector of the tax, which amount the said taxable person, firm, association or corporation shall be entitled to offset as payment for interest or principal upon said dower, mortgage, judgement, ground rent or charge. License taxes upon wholesale and retail venders of merchandise are repealed. The Auditor General and State Treasurer shall annually fix the tax rate upon the capital stock and shares of private corporations subject to tax.

Miners Resume Operations.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 21.—The superintendents of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre and the Delaware and Hudson Coal companies' mines in this city received orders from headquarters to resume work to-morrow. The glad tidings are received with joy by all classes, particularly the business men, who have been in an uncertain state of mind since the shut down. Nine thousand miners have been idle two weeks.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of the JOURNAL will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known in the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The Proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars, for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Terrible Accident.

On Monday morning, Jan. 24th, a terrific boiler explosion occurred at Spang, Chalfaut & Co's bar iron mills, at Etna, Pa., by which one man, the engineer, lost his life and another was fatally hurt. It was a battery of four steel boilers which gave way. The report of the explosion was heard for miles and heavy pieces of iron were hurled hundreds of yards from the mill. The works are entirely destroyed, the loss being estimated at $30,000 to $50,000.

Death of General G. A. Scroggs.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 24.—General Gustavus A. Scroggs, died here to-day, aged 66 years. He was born in Darlington, Pennsylvania, became a lawyer and removed to Buffalo in 1840. He was brigadier-general of the Thirteenth brigade, national guard, and during the war was provost marshal at Buffalo. He also for a time commanded the Twenty-fifth regiment of United States colored troops. In 1856 he was the candidate of the American party for lieutenant governor, and came within a few votes of being elected.

"Please, Papa Don't Go; You are Sick."

EASTON, Pa., Jan. 21.—George Slack of Philipsburg, for thirteen years a brakeman on the Belvidere Delaware railroad, was killed on that road last night a short distance from his home. While the train was being backed on a siding Slack fell from the top of a freight car to the track. His head and both arms were cut off and his body almost to the hips cut to pieces. Slack was unwell yesterday, and before leaving home last evening his little girl ran after him and said, 'Please, papa, don't go; You are sick.' He leaves a wife and two children.

RISING RIVERS.

The Schuylkill and the Susquehanna Up at the Ice Gorges.

READING, January 24.—Owing to last night's rain all small streams in this vicinity and the Schuylkill river have risen. The ice in the river broke this morning and a monster gorge formed near Shoemakersville, above Reading. The ice is packed solidly ten and fifteen feet high the entire width of the river for several miles and the water being unable to follow the course of the river is now being driven back and flows over the surrounding country, many acres being under water. Many fences have been carried away and some live stock drowned.

LOCK HAVEN, January 24.—Telegrams from up river districts state that the ice in the Susquehanna is breaking and gorging at different places, the nearest gorge being at Westport, thirty miles west of this city. No fears are entertained here, as the river is not high enough to do any great damage.

The Microscopical Society of West Chester has been at considerable pains to collect and publish the opinions of eminent scientific authorities as to the usefulness of the law offering a premium for the destruction of hawks, owls, minks and weasels, and there is a decided unanimity in favor of repeal. Ornithologist Merriam, of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, ranks both hawks and owls among the best friends of the farmer, and says that instead of a bounty there should be a fine for their slaughter, since they consume mice and insects on a large scale. Curator Ridgway, of the Bird Department of the Smithsonian Institution, confirms this view and other scientists concur in it. One is tempted to wonder, in view of the facts, how such a law ever came to be enacted by the Legislature, until it is remembered that the members knew that they did not know anything about it and supposed that their farmer constituents were better informed. The farmers are now frankly admitting that they were mistaken and demanding the repeal of the law. There is no doubt now that it should be repealed and allowed to stay repealed.—Phila. Times.

Resolutions of Progress Grange.

The following resolutions were passed at a meeting of the Progress Grange, at Centre Hall, at a meeting held on January 22:

WHEREAS, Many newspapers inconsiderately urge and advocate upon Congress the placing of agricultural raw products on the free list for the benefit of the manufacturers of these products for whom they would retain the highest protection from foreign competition which policy, if it were adopted, would still further diminish the value of our already depreciated farm products by many millions of dollars without a corresponding reduction in the prices of manufactures, which would be a gross injustice to the farmers of our country, and lead to bankruptcy and ruin, therefore,

Resolved, That we enter our protest against Congress placing agricultural products on the free list so long as the manufacturers are given the benefit of protection; and that we also protest against any policy by the press that discriminates against agriculture in favor of manufactures and ask our farmers to withdraw their support and patronage from all periodicals and papers that will thus manifestly injure our industry.

Resolved, That we favor such legislation by the State and National Legislature that will protect all our industries alike and develop them to the highest perfection and bring the greatest remuneration and comforts to those engaged in them.

A Big Steal of Hogs.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—A case of hog stealing on a grand scale, said to have been carried on for the past two years, came to light yesterday by the arrest of Dennis McGurl, proprietor of a soap factory, his son, and five employes, who are alleged to have done the work. It is claimed that during that time no less than 3,500 hogs have been taken from the train of the Chicago and Northwestern Road, aggregating in value between $18,000 and $20,000.

The plan of the robbery was to board a stock train at a railroad crossing or other stopping point and, entering one of the cars, remain there until the train was under headway. Opening the door of the car, three or four hogs could be thrown off in short order and unobserved and the thieves would themselves slight. The country through which the road passes on the western outskirts of the city is so deserted that the scheme was never exposed until the detectives had worked upon the case for some time. Finally suspicion settled on McGurl and his men. People in the neighborhood of the factory began to suspect that the proprietor was getting rich too fast. McGurl has been doing a thriving business, supplying the large hotels with great quantities of soap which, it is now charged, was made from the stolen hogs.

Filling the Offices.

Governor Beaver Will Have Plenty of Aid in Running the Government.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 21.—Samuel Matt Fridy, for many years clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and later Prothonotary of Lancaster county, will probably be the next Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth. The position was offered him a few days ago and it is understood he has accepted.

Ex-Adjutant General Guthrie left for Pittsburg to-day, satisfied that he would not be appointed commander of the Second Brigade National Guard, formerly commanded by General Beaver. Colonel John A. Wily, of Venango county, is to have the place.

Captain Thomas F. Maloney, Superintendent of the State Arsenal, is to be retained on account of his efficiency.

Robert Snodgrass, of this city, will probably consent to serve as Deputy Attorney General under Attorney General Kirkpatrick.

In connection with the bill appropriating $81,000 to erect memorial tablets to mark the positions of the eighty-one Pennsylvania regiments in the battle of Gettysburg on the 1st, 2nd and 3rd of July, 1863, an effort is being made to have a commission created to disburse the money. The soldiers who are pressing the appropriation are opposed to the proposed commission because no necessity exists for its creation.

Governor Beaver is kept busy listening to personal appeals for office and reading letters of similar import. About two thousand persons have thus far indicated their willingness to fill the fifty positions in the gift of the new administration. The letters addressed to the Governor since he assumed the duties of his office have become so numerous that Private Secretary Pearson has been obliged to employ a shorthand writer to answer the communications, most of which are from applicants for office or friends representing them.

—Jos. Jordan, one of Aaronsburg's venerable citizens, was a welcome caller at the JOURNAL office on Tuesday. Mr. Jordan is getting well on in years and age is beginning to tell on him. But with all that he retains his sociable disposition and is always willing to enter into pleasant conversation.

—The news coming from the North Carolina copper mines, operated by W. Raker and Mr. Kauffman, Sr., the father of our townsman, D. S. Kauffman, are very encouraging. The mines are paning out very rich. Capitalists from Philedelphia, Harrisburg and from the state of Ohio, are purchasing mineral tracts. Among these is J. R. Kauffman from Asherton, Pa. In six months all the available lands will be bought. But as yet there is still room to make fortunes. It is an established fact that some of the richest ore in the world is mined at these mines and the sooner the men who wish to invest in the plant go there the quicker their capital will double itself.

—MUST GO. The horrible nauseous worm-seed compounds called vermifuges and worm syrups, many of them as worthless as they are obnoqious, have had their day. It's downright cruelty to compel a child to take them, when McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders, so easy and pleasant to take that children will take them and never know a medicine is being administered, can be procured for the small sum of twenty-five cents. Any case of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded.

OBITUARY.—John Hoy, Sr., of Madisonburg, of whose death we made mention in our last issue, was a prominent and widely-known citizen of Miles township and having come into possession of some points about his history we feel like giving our readers the benefit of the information. Mr. Hoy was born in Berks county in 1794, and shortly afterwards his father moved to Centre county and settled in Penns valley, near Millheim, on the farm now owned by George Stover. Several years after that the family moved to Brush valley on the farm where John Hoy breathed his last. When quite young he was married to Margaret Hoy, to whom he had 15 children. She died in 1853 and he remained a widower for 11 years. In 1864 he was united in marriage to Rebecca Smeltzer. He then occupied a lot adjoining the farm where he had spent his earlier days. He was supposed to be quite wealthy and years ago one night a gang of burglars attacked him in his house, bound and gagged him, and threw sand and pepper into his eyes. A short time after wards the attempt was repeated but the robbers did not succeed in getting anything. Mr. Hoy was a robust and healthy man, did all his own work and only a year ago he cut 15 sheaves of wheat with the sickle in one day. He was said to have been the strongest man in Brushvalley in his day. Last summer his health began to fail and he concluded to quit housekeeping and go back to the old homestead to spend the rest of his days there. Of his fifteen children only one remains living, Mrs. Benj. Roush. He had five grand children and eleven great grand children. His age at the time of his death was 92 years, 3 months and 4 days.

—JUST SO. The wise and prudent man now procures a bottle of Dr. Kessler's Celebrated English Cough Medicine and keeps it in the house to be prepared for croup and whooping-cough emergencies. It never fails. It never disappoints. Instructions for treatment of croup and whooping-cough on each wrapper. Nothing like it for colds and all lung troubles. Dissatisfied buyers can have their money returned.

SMITH TOWN.

In this kind of weather Mud Town would be a proper name.

The convention is over and everybody seems satisfied.

Among our sick are Mrs. Geo. Royer, one of her children, and Mrs. Emma Kimport.

Miss Aggie Ulrich, who had been working at Al. Keen's, went home to attend her sick grandmother, Mrs. Stover, in Millheim.

Rev. Swengle was hereabouts last week making pastorial calls.

Charles Horner, the young man whose premature death was recorded last week, will be remembered by the Smith Town people, in whose midst he spent last summer, as the jolly musician who produced such fine music on the mouth organ. In the bloom of life he was snatched away to eternity.

Jacob Keen, of Millheim, sold the timberland on his farm near this place to some lumbering party and it is fast being cut out. There are some gigantic trees on the tract. Twelve horses were hitched to a log last week but it was too heavy and could not be moved.

R. D. Foreman, of the Pike school gives the following report for the third month ending Jan. 24th: No. of pupils on roll, males 23, females 16, total 39; average attendance, males 20, females 10, total 30; per cent. of attendance, males 89, females 77. JUMBO.

AARONSBURG.

Miss Jennie Medler, from Allentown, Pa., was here visiting her uncle J. P. Coburn.

Mr. David Stover, from below town, bought the widow Shirk property, situated at the east end of town, for his son-in-law, Mr. Benj. Jackson.

We want a good saddler and harness maker in our burg. All our farmers in and about town must go to Millheim to have their harness work done. This should not be so. [Why not; is Millheim not a good place to come to? You ought to give advice of another sort. Ed.]

The large crowd which gathers at the Lutheran church every evening is evidence of the interest people show in this meeting in progress there now and conducted by Rev. Deitzler. People will attend regardless of the bad weather we have had for some time past. Quite a large number have already been converted, nearly all heads of families. The house was packed on last Sunday evening, notwithstanding the rain.

Look out for the Reformed Ladies' Mite Society Musical Convention, the 1st week in February. The time will soon be here. ANOTHER.

PENN HALL.

Sleighing has disappeared.

The convention held at the Salem church last week was a success. It would have been impossible to be otherwise with so many talented singers in attendance and such an able conductor at the head. The professor has gained many friends here and we hope he may receive many more calls from here in the future. The proceeds of the convention amounted to $68.75.

This place was convulsed by an exciting controversy last week, all of which originated from three small, insignificant coons. These helpless creatures had their abode in the hollow of a tree, about 60 feet from the ground, in Squire Hering's woods. Two separate parties were laying plans and had made several unsuccessful attempts to capture them. On last Friday afternoon Johnnie and his followers secretly chained ladders to the tree, a la Jacobs, as a means of ascending. It took the boys until dark to complete the tedious job and they had to postpone the capture until the next day. In the meantime the shoemaker and his band, who are all experienced coonhunters, spied the ladders on the following morning, went up, captured the coons and took them home alive. The afternoon came and Johnnie with the other boys arrived on the ground—but imagine their surprise and rage—when they found nothing left to do for them but to take down their ladders. Justice was appealed to but without avail as they were unable to furnish the necessary information. There are now ominous war clouds hanging over the neighborhood. There is as yet no damage except that the shoemaker is minus some leather and custom. But when the fight begins Denver Dan wishes to be notified, so as to be able to escape to Canada, as we are no fighting character.

DENVER DAN.

REBERSBURG.

No more sleighing parties at present.

Thos. Wate paid his annual visit to the Gramley school one day last week. Of course he was courteously received by at least some of the young lasses in attendance there.

Jasper Gramley, of Illinois, who has been visiting relatives in this vicinity will leave on next Monday for his western home. He will be accompanied by Miss Julia Bower, of Nittany, who will pay her sister, Mrs. Aaron Gramley, of Aurora, a short visit.

Harvey Corman, Esq., has purchased the Rebersburg hotel property for $2000. Mr. Corman will take possession of the hotel some time in spring and will keep strictly a temperance house.

There is a wedding on the tapis. At least we are reliably informed that a certain young gentleman from this vicinity was to Bellefonte to procure the necessary papers.

Guiswite & Co. have lately bought a large lot of saw logs from Joel Morris, of near Wolf's store.

A missionary convention is at present being held in the Reformed church of this place. A number of ministers from a distance are in attendance.

Willis Weber was the lucky winner at the late shooting match. The prize was a pet deer which he afterwards sold to S. L. Strohecker for $12.

Guiswite & Co. have purchased a new engine for their saw mill near this place. The old engine had been used for many years and was thought to be unsafe for further use by the engineer.

Mrs. Sallie Wolf, widow of the late David Wolf, of near Wolf's store, has lately made her home with Daniel Dubbs in this place.

Jno. Shultz will move on his father's farm, known as the old Shultz farm the coming spring. SQUIBOB.

MADISONBURG.

The protracted meeting in the Evangelical church is still in progress. Rev. Stambach preached on Saturday evening and Rev. Swengle of Millheim on Sunday.

Rev. Basom is holding quarterly meeting at Spring Mills.

The Reformed members will hold a series of missionary meetings on Tuesday and Wednesday.

David Burd expects to move on his own farm in the spring. Harvey Hauck will move on his father's farm two miles west of town. Charley Rachau will move on Kline's farm, four miles west of town, now occupied by David Burd.

That show from Millheim—I hardly know what to say about it. Their conduct while on street parade was exceedingly funny (?) to say the least. By all appearances it was to be a minstrel show, but the tree pitch in at the pump and afterwards on the outside stairway of the hall made us doubtful what name to give to the troupe. We were not present at the performance proper and could not learn from those that were there what it was like.

Miss Alice Nestleroad has returned from her visit to Lock Haven.

David Shafer purchased the Houtz property at the upper end of town for $400.

Salt Rheum

The agonies of those who suffer from severe salt rheum are indescribable. The cleansing, healing, purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla are unequalled by any other medicine.

"I take pleasure in recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it has done wonders for me. I had salt rheum very severely, affecting me over nearly my entire body. Only those who have suffered from this disease in its worst form can imagine the extent of my affliction. I tried many medicines, but failed to receive benefit until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then the disease began to subside, the disappeared, and now I am entirely free from the disease. My blood seems to be thoroughly purified, and my general health is greatly benefited." LYMAN ALLEN, Sexton N. E. Church, North Chicago, Ill.

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and the calves of his legs, so bad that they would crack open and bleed. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

From 108 to 135

"I was seriously troubled with salt rheum for three years, and receiving no benefit from medical treatment I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I am now entirely cured of salt rheum; my weight has increased from 108 lbs. to 135." MRS. ALICE SMITH, Stamford, Conn.

If you suffer from salt rheum, or any blood disease, try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has cured many others, and will cure you.

Some Pinkerton Stories.

"I don't know of anything further to say just now than that we haye always done the business of the Adams express company since 1859, and we are especially pround of this case. We commenced with the $50,000 robbery, committed by Nathan Maroney at Montgomery, Alabama, which was 'done' by my father and George H. Bangs, late superintendent of the agency, now dead. At that time the agency was unknown outside of Chicago. Mr. E. S. Sanford, then the president of the Adams express company, counseled with Robert Boyer, a New York detective of that day, regarding the heavy robbery at Montgomery, and Boyer said that he only knew of one man in the country—a detective who had the pluck and resources to stick to the matter and follow it up to a successful conclusion; and that was a Scotchman who lived in Chicago named Allan Pinkerton. Sanford hooted at the idea of going to a western village to find a detective; but on Boyer persisting, Sanford sent for Pinkerton to come to New York. The case was placed in his hands and after seven months of hard work $49,000 of the money was recovered at Jenkintown, a suburb of Philadelphia, in the original package it was stolen, and Maroney, who had been the agent of the company, was sent to the penitentiary for ten years. A very elaborate receipt for this work now hangs in our office in this city.

The next Adams express robbery was in 1863 on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore road, in which $89,000 was stolen. Under our direction all the thieves were arrested and convicted. The next was a $600,000 robbery on January 6, 1866, stolen from the Adams express messenger on the New York and New Haven road at Coscob, Conn. The money was all recovered by us and the robbers imprisoned for long terms.

"The fact is," said Mr. Pinkerton, "we haye never lost a case for the Adams express company in thirty years. Whenever a robbery occurs on their lines they give the Pinkertons carte blanche to get the robbers first and the money afterward. The motto of the Adams people is never to compromise or compound with thieyes; and they will follow a thief to the end of the world who depredates on their property. At one stage of the present case we were led to suppose that Wittrock had escaped to Australia, and I was arranging to start there for him."

The Treatment for a Cold.

The Monthly Magazine [London] reports Dr. Graham as saying that it is not a correct practice, after a cold is caught, to make the room a person sits in much warmer than usual, to increase the quantity of bed clothes, wrap up in flannel, and drink a large quantity of hot tea, gruel or other slops, because it will invariably increase the feverishness, and in the majority of instances, prolong rather than lessen the duration of the cold. It is well-known that confining inoculated persons in warm rooms will make their small-pox more violent by augmenting the general heat and fever; and it is for the same reason that a similar practice in the present complaint is attended with anologous results, a cold being in reality a slight fever. In some parts of England, among the lower order of the people, a large glass of cold spring water, taken on going to bed, is found to be a successful remedy, and in fact many medical practitioners recommend a reduced atmosphere and frequent draughts of cold fluid as the most efficacious remedy for a recent cold, particularly when the patient's habit is full and plethoric.
